DESCRIPTION OF SEALINE S37

The Sealine S37 is a fast motor yacht with great seagoing characteristics and with ample space both in the cockpit as well as down below. The S37 was built in 1999, during the era of growth and improvement of quality under the leadership of Gerard Wainwright. Substantial funds were invested by venture capitalist and the operation improved and was then sold on in 2001 to the Brunswick Corporation.

The cockpit is large and open, but also easily covered by canvas with support of the substantial targa arch in the aft sections of the cockpit. Perfect to quickly adapt to changing weather. There is a U-shaped sofa in the cockpit. Opposite is an outdoor refrigerator with a sink. At the helm station, there is seating for two. The cockpit floor is covered in teak, and there is easy access to the twin platform, which is also covered in teak. On the foredeck, there is a large subbed, perfect for use while at anchor.

The boat has a two-cabin layout, with the owner's cabin in the bow featuring a central double berth. The guest cabin is a mid cabin with a comfortable double berth with comfortable seating and enough floor space and headroom to be comfortable. There are also two "marine wet cells", one being the actual toilet and the other a dedicated shower space.

This S37 had two new Hammerhead V8 marine diesel engines, new in 2010, installed, coupled to Mercury Bravo stern drives from 2011. The hours are low at approximately 495. The boat is in normal condition for its age, with among other things, relatively new charger and batteries, 2022, and canvas, 2024.

This a roomy motor yacht that is a pleasure to both drive and to spend time onboard.
